Q Is there any particular document I can read about the church's position on life issues? I am looking for something that gives me more than just a list of issues and where the church stands on them.

A In the mind of many people, life issues are the defining social, political and theological issues of the twenty-first century. Marriage, homosexuality, health care, gay rights, economic justice, abortion and euthanasia are debated and discussed from all angles and perspectives. Pope John Paul II wrote an encyclical letter, Evangelium Vitae, the Gospel of Life, in which he lays out the foundation for the church's position on these issues. At the heart of the letter is a profound respect for all human life because we all share in God's life. It is the responsibility of every human being to defend and preserve and protect human life from beginning until its end, allowing each person to pursue his or her goodness. In other words, all people have a dignity and destiny that is rooted in the fact that they are created by God to share in his life. Therefore, all life is of the highest value and is owed respect.

Many viewpoints contrary to life use other measures to determine the value of life. Most of these begin with the idea that the individual is the measure of his own life and may decide with his or her conscience. However, we believe that we are God's creation, subject to his will and responsible for our life and the lives of others. Every threat to the dignity of people needs to be addressed and corrected.

28TH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME: It seems that there is always an exception. The rules for a game are to be observed, except when certain conditions arise that make for a new rule. While much of the game is the same, the rules in baseball or football have adapted to different situations over time. The NFL did not allow a two-point conversion after a touchdown while the AFL did. After the leagues merged, the two-point conversion was abandoned. It would return twenty-five years later when the NFL adopted the two-point conversion rule in 1994. The exception that the AFL had in its ten years of existence eventually became the rule in league play. For most fans this nearly twenty year-old play is just part of the game, although some purists still debate the wisdom of the move.

In the Gospel today, Jesus tells the ten lepers to go and show themselves to the priests who are the ones who can certify that the leprosy with which they were each afflicted has been cleansed. This was the statute prescribed in the law of Moses, and after an examination by the priests, a leper who was healed could then return to the community. Nine of these lepers follow the rules. One of them breaks away after he realizes that he has been cleansed and returns to thank Jesus.

The action of the leper who returned to give thanks has become the exception that proves the rule. The law of Moses required that anyone cleansed of leprosy would offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving to the Lord for the divine intervention. When the Samaritan returned to thank Jesus, he was implicitly signaling that the Lord was present in our midst. Like the Samaritan leper, we can recognize that the Lord has been at work in our lives, and we can offer thanks. It's a good rule to put in place for our entire life, and not just an occasional exception.
