Q We have a small parish that shares a priest with three other parishes in the area. While this has not yet happened, I was wondering if there were no priests available for Mass, would it be considered a sin to miss Mass?

A The Catechism teaches us that serious or mortal sin requires three conditions: grave matter, full knowledge and deliberate consent. (CCC 1857). Obviously in the situation you described there is no choice or control in the matter. A priest is either available or not. This can happen even when the priest is normally available but on a given Sunday is sick or away. It would be a different story, however, if the priest at your parish was unavailable, but you could attend Mass at a close neighboring parish.

In the eastern part of the country, we have many ethnic based parishes and people who refer to parishes as the Italian or Polish parish. Ethnicities are not an excuse. As a church that is one, holy, catholic, and apostolic, ethnic hierarchies are part of our history, not the definition of the church. So, in answer to your question, common sense rules. If a priest is just not available, there is no sin and we are not responsible. If we have an opportunity to attend Mass, and choose not to, we are responsible and therefore sin.

33RD SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME: We are nearing the end of the Atlantic hurricane season. There are many people in this country who pay little heed to this designation, which typically runs from June 1 to November 30 each year. On the other hand, there are large segments of the populace for whom hurricane season is a time to follow the weather broadcasts more closely. For those who live in the affected areas of the country, being prepared for a hurricane's arrival is part of life. Long-range preparation includes things like having an evacuation plan, knowing where important documents are, and having some emergency cash. When a storm is close at hand, vigilance heightens as people board up windows, stockpile supplies, and stay tuned to weather forecasts. Local and state governments execute their disaster preparedness plans to ensure the safety of citizens. In the Gospel this weekend, Jesus encounters some people who were enamored of all the beauty of the Temple. For them, this was a sign of a certain permanence and blessing rendered by God. In Luke's Gospel, written after the Jerusalem Temple had been destroyed, the Gospel writer has Jesus describing the city's doom and the Temple's destruction. Just like the citizens of hurricane areas who pay close attention to weather reports when there is an approaching storm, the people in the Gospel ask Jesus for the sign that what he describes will happen. Like folks who live in a hurricane zone, we need to be prepared. Our long-range preparation includes having an evacuation plan. The evacuation plan isn't about gathering up belongings and pulling out before the storm hits. The evacuation plan for a Christian is being prepared to leave this life when the time comes. That means that during our life on earth we have stayed close to God by being faithful to him and trying to live the kind of life Christ has taught us by loving our neighbor. Are you ready to go?
